Office of Legislative Counsel

Thursday - 2 October 1958

Met with Captain Carlton Adams in the DOD Legislative and Liaison Office and Colonel James Adducci of Air Force L & L to discuss the question of physical security in congressional offices. Discussed with them certain of the technical aspects which have been observed in the last year. All shared concern over the lack of procedures and up-to-date facilities. Captain Adams was going to discuss the matter with his own security people and then proposed to discuss the matter further with Bryce Harlow in the White House looking toward an executive branch approach to the legislative branch on this question. It was agreed that DOD would carry the ball and that CIA would not be brought into the picture.
